The Coast Line of the Pacific, Although the Pacific covers more than half the surface of the globe and has an area estimated roughly at 90,-200,000 square miles, yet its coast line, even including that of the Indian ocean, is but 47,000 miles, or about 8,000 miles less than that of the Atlantic. The shores of the Atlantic are very deeply indented by large seas, of which the Baltic and Mediterranean are the most remarkable. Besides these, the greatest lateral seas and gulfs in the Atlantic are the gulf of Mexico, Caribbean sea, Hudson bay and the bay of Biscay. If we take from the Pacific the Red sea, Arabian sea and bay of Bengal, which are part of the Indian ocean, we leave it with a remarkably straight coast line, with the exception of a few deep indentations on the coast of Asia.

It is owing to a free impenetration of land and water and consequent ease of communication between one country and another that the most civilized nations of the world, with few exceptions, have lived and now live on the shores of the north Atlantic and its lateral seas.

Bob Toombs' Way. General Robert Toombs was as impulsive as he was courageous. Once, in the midst of a hot political campaign, a stump orator said something about the general's arrest by Robert E. Lee for insubordination, frightfully distorting the incident. Toombs wrote one of the hottest letters of his life and was about to seal it when a friend entered his office and, seeing him much agitated, inquired the cause. The letter was handed to him to read, and when he had finished it be remarked, "You don't intend to send that to him?" "I do," said Toombs. "Better wait till tomorrow and think it over, general." "Never, sir! I have known him to be a liar, a never before had cause to tell him so. wouldn't miss it for the senatorship. Wait till tomorrow? Think it over? That is to throw away the chance of a lifetime. Strike while the iron is bot, sir! Bob Toombs is the iron! Bob Toombs is hot! Toombs will strike!"-New York Press.

Spring Opening

The spring opening at the Verona Remnant Store (J. E. Williams & Co.). on Tuesday attracted a large number of women folks from this town and Glen Ridge. The Verona store has a wide reputation as one of the best places in this county for bargains in dry goods, and the bargains that are special there now are in lines of goods that can be made up for summer wear, and are being sold by the pound at a large reduction in price. For the particular varieties of goods that are now offered, our readers are referred to the store's advertisement on page 8 of this issue. The Bloomfield avenue trolley cars pass within a short block of the Remnant Store.

Mr. Ward Stephens, the Planist.

Mr. Stephens is perhaps better known n Europe, where the most of his work has been done, than in America. He made his debut in Paris in 1896, and afterwards played with great success in all the principal European cities. He made a tour of the United States last season with Seymour Adams, and is engaged for next season's tour with Campanari of the Grand Opera. He is also to play with Theodore Thomas's Ochestra and with the Kneisel String Quartette. Quite recently he played at the White House, Washington, in a musicale; in Baltimore with Casals ('cellist), and in Brooklyn with Maud Powell. It is expected that Mr. Stephens will play at both the Banner-Kronold concerts in Jarvie Memorial Hall. The committee has also engaged for the first coacert, March 8, Mrs. Elizabeth Schaup, soprano.
